

FARMER KILLED 8; PRISONED FOR LIFE

Henry Layver Slew Entire Family
on Neighboring Farm, Including Chore Boy.

WASHBURN, N. D., May 14.—Henry Layver, self-confessed slayer of eight persons at Turtle Lake, N. D., April 22, has started serving a life term at hard labor at the State Penitentiary at Bismarck.

Layver confessed to the killing of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wolf, their five small daughters and the chore boy, Jake Hofer, on the Wolf farm, three miles from Turtle Lake, N. D., April 22. His feeling of long standing culminated in a quarrel over injuries to one of Layver's sons inflicted by Wolf's dog. Layver went to Wolf's farm.

According to Layver's confession to the authorities, when he refused to leave the place Wolf went into the sitting room, got his double barreled shotgun and loaded two shells into the breach. Layver grasped the gun and attempted to wrest it away from Wolf. The struggle took place in the entrance of the kitchen, during which the gun was discharged twice. Layver claims in his confession one of these shots killed Mrs. Wolf and the other the thirteen year old chore boy. Layver succeeded in wresting the gun away from Wolf.

He darted into the sitting room, got a handful of shells from the bureau and hurried back to the kitchen entrance. Wolf was running toward the barn and Layver fired the shots, striking Wolf in the back.

Two of the smaller daughters, frightened at the fighting and seeing their mother and the boy fall dead in the kitchen, ran into the adjoining bedroom and escaped from the house, running to the nearby cowshed. Attracted by their screams, Layver rushed into the barn and shot them. The three little girls in the house were screaming. Layver returned to the kitchen and deliberately killed the children.

Report That Supreme Court Will Quash Volstead Act Sends Price Down.

Following the report of a decrease in the price of whiskey to restaurant proprietors, because of the belief that the Supreme Court would declare the Volstead act unconstitutional, Government officials here declared yesterday that the sale of whiskey was being carried on frantically.

The fact that many saloons have continued to keep their doors open since the prohibition amendment became effective has caused comment. Although agents of the prohibition enforcement staff have raided saloons, crowds have remained standing at the open bars every night.

One man who claimed authentic information said that until a month ago illicit purveyors of whiskey were obtaining $120 a case. He declared that the report of the Supreme Court decision caused the price to drop to $90 a case, and later to $70. He said the prevailing price for a case of whiskey on Wednesday was $75. The price over the bar varied, from $9 to 75 cents a drink. Several arrests were made in Brooklyn yesterday.

Thomas E. Rush, Surveyor of the Port, received a letter yesterday informing him that liquor was concealed in the hold of the steamship Morro Castle of the Ward Line, at New York, Brooklyn, and he sent three inspectors to investigate. They found about 200 bottles of quinine in the ship, but no arrests were made.
